TAPA CLOTH

TAPA CLOTH was made throughout the South Pacific and was an integral part of the Polynesian culture. It is handmade from the inner bark of the Paper Mulberry tree.

The bark is first soaked and then beaten with wooden beaters until thin and supple. Patterns are imprinted using hardwood panels, boards and beaters which have been carved with intricate designs.

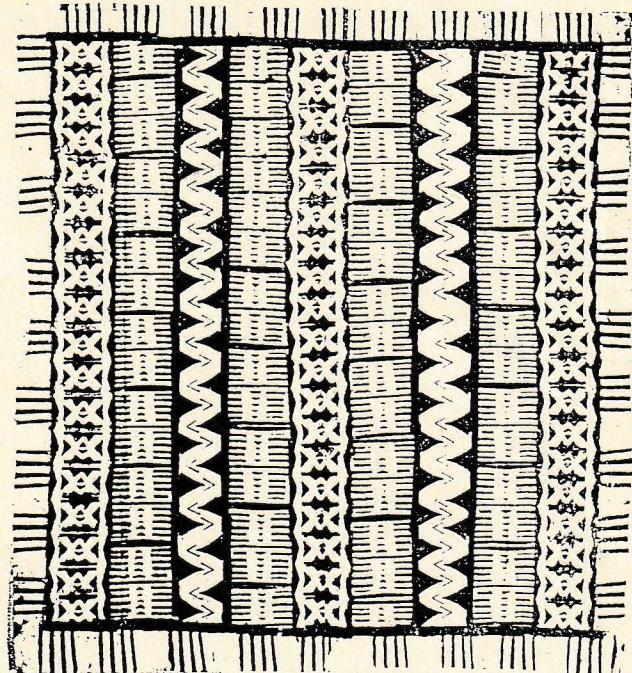

The pigments in the dyes are made from bark or Mangrove roots mixed with natural oils, resins and sea water. The off-white background is the natural color of the Mulberry bark.

OCEANIC ARTS carries two types of authentic TAPA, handmade according to tradition.

TONGAN TAPA (called Ngatu) has a pulpier texture. The colors are warm tones of dark browns, lighter browns and beige on an ivory background. Designs combine geometric and symbolic motifs depicting birds, plants, animals, royal crests, religious symbols, etc.

Sizes vary with each TAPA, from 5' x 10' prox. @ $125.00 (est) to 7'6" x 14'6" @ $293.00 (est).

FIJIAN TAPA (called Masai in Fiji) is known by its subtle brown, amber and black geometric designs on the ivory background.

Typical sizes in stock are:

24" diameter	4' x 6'
36" diameter	4' x 8'
